Prospective Students

Policy Language

Prospective students are assessed according to academic background; personal moral behavior and character; personal philosophy; and willingness to follow Liberty's rules, regulations, and policies. In the consideration process, the applicant's complete prior academic record, recommendations, plans for the future, and personal information will be reviewed upon request. Applicants meeting the required standards in these areas may be admitted to one of the academic terms at the University.

Policy Rationale

To broadly state the criteria that Resident Admissions utilizes in assessing prospective students.
